629th takes 2nd at en route rodeo

SSgt. Rosaire Bushey
Editor

The 629th Air Mobility Support Squadron proved size doesn't matter during the 2nd annual 621st Air Mobility Support Group En Route Rodeo held at Rhein Main Air Base, Germany June 8 through 13.

The squadron sent a 9-member team to compete head to head against the bigger bases and en route units such as Rota Naval Air Station, Spain, Ramstein Air Base and Rhein-Main AB, Germany, Aviano AB, Italy, Incirlik Air Station, Turkey, and Royal Air Force Mildenhall, England. Over the period of one week, the team and its members competed in a series of events and when the dust settled the 629th was in 2nd place behind Ramstein.

"This is the second year Ramstein has won," said Lt. Col. Craig Murra, 629th AMSS Commander. "The big difference is, this year we were pretty close and last year it was very lopsided. It shows that for a small unit we've got some extremely talented and hard working people. This event showcases their dedication and professionalism."

Several different areas were included in the event scenarios including command and control, transportation and logistics. Of these the Lajes contingent took a series of individual and team awards.

In the individual category Lou Terrell was first in the flight following and best overall categories; the team of Gene Herrera, Greg Lynch and Chris Gulotta were first in liquid oxygen servicing, second in through flight inspection and third in the team confidence course. The team scored a perfect 100 in the liquid oxygen servicing event, according to Murra.

The unit's maintenance team placed second overall and first in liquid oxygen servicing while the transportation side of the house took part in eight different events. "Our transporters - Rob Bolton, Brian Broyles, Rui Dinis, Rui Silva and Kyle Carroll, came away with two firsts, a second and a third,"

Joint chiefs chairman says strategic transportation still number one priority

TSgt. Kenneth Fidler
375th Airlift Wing public affairs

SCOTT AIR FORCE BASE, Ill. (AFNS) — The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff said the strategic transportation business remains his No. 1 priority, even in the wake of Quadrennial Defense Review's proposed cuts and realignments.

Army Gen. John Shalikashvili visited U.S. Transportation Command here June 17 and said in a press conference that his priority is to "ensure that we can go anywhere in the world, from the simplest humanitarian missions that we perform every day to a major war that we might have to fight to the far reaches of the world."

"We couldn't do any of this if it weren't for the men and women of the U.S. Transportation Command and all their component commands. It's good to come here (and) see how they're doing," he said.

The chairman attended briefings by USTRANSCOM and Air Mobility Command. "When you sit and listen to what's happening here and review the statistics, this is one ready command. So I'm immensely proud of everything they do here."

Shalikashvili said his interest under QDR is that the proposed reductions not have an impact on the military's warfighting capability. "Some tremendous work is being done here. This base and what is being done here is extraordinarily important to this nation's warfighting capability."

TSgt. Kevin Skates, 629th Air Mobility Support Squadron, received both the John Levitow Award and the Academic Achievement Award after attending the NCO Academy.

Birth

SSgt. Mark and Terri Hamrick are the parents of Haleigh Nicole, born June 10 at Andrews AFB, Md. Haleigh weighed in at 6 pounds, 15 ounces. Sergeant Hamrick works at the 65th Services Division.

Awards

The American Hotel and Motel Association recently awarded a plaque to Lajes lodging operations for successfully implementing the Performance Plus Training Program. The program is a professional certification program exclusively for hospitality personnel and is acknowledged world wide and sanctioned by the American Hotel and Motel Association. The award recognizes the organization's commitment and dedication to train and develop its employees. It also reminds employees of the effort to provide outstanding guest services.

Suggestions

The following people received awards for their suggestions to the Lajes suggestion program. They are:

SSgt. Matthew Wehman and Sr. João Fragueiro, 65th Civil Engineer Squadron, each received $255 for their suggestion to improve the reliability and repair costs associated with existing fire alarms.

Bonnie Wheeler, received $25 for her suggestion to assist in reducing the high number of edits made on enlisted and officer performance reports. The change will allow for quicker processing of EPRs and OPRs.

Services survey looks for improvement suggestions

Ann LeBlond
Services marketing

Services has a long history of service to Air Force people and its programs are a critical part of the readiness equation. Services programs contribute to readiness and productivity by promoting fitness, esprit de corps, and quality of life for servicemembers and their families.

The goal of services is to become the undisputed leader in providing expertly managed and customer-driven programs which deliver value and quality to their customers.

To accomplish this goal, services needs your input. Only you, the customer, can provide important information needed to make program decisions, plan marketing strategies, and formulate short and long-term goals. Your opportunity for input may appear in your mail box during the next few weeks in the form of the Air Forces Services Marketing Survey. If you are randomly selected to receive a survey, you will be asked about your participation in on-base services and competing off-base activities as well as how often and where you participate. You can also note changes which would increase your services use.

The survey has been approved for distribution by the Air Force and its survey control number is SCN 96-17.

Take the time to fill out and return the survey. Ask your spouse and children for their input in sections which apply to their participation in services activities. Help your services staff make a difference in the programs they offer to you, your family, and to the entire Lajes community.

If you have any questions, call Ext. 21323.

Savings bond drive enters final week

LCDR Michael Loeber
Lajes project officer

Monday marks the end of the 1997 U.S. Savings Bond drive for the Air Force. However, that doesn't mean the end of an opportunity for a great way to save. Savings bonds can be purchased at any time and easily through the payroll savings plan.

If you haven't been contacted by your unit keyperson yet and want more information on the plan, call Ext. 21162 for the name and number of your keyperson.

If you're wondering why bonds are such a great deal, here are a few reasons

• Easy to buy

You can buy series EE bonds through most financial institutions and through the payroll savings plan. There is no fee and no commission.

• Safe and secure

Bonds are backed by the full faith and credit of the United States. Bonds can be replaced free of charge if lost, stolen or destroyed, as long as it can be established by the Bureau of the Public Debt that the bonds are either still outstanding or have been erroneously paid.

• Competitive

Series EE bonds offer investors a good rate of return. Your investment will grow for 30 years, but if needed, bonds can be cashed any time after six months. The longer you hold your bond, the more it's worth.

• Education savings

Savings bonds may provide tax savings when used to finance higher education.

• Tax advantages

Interest earned on bonds is exempt from state and local income tax. You can also defer paying federal income tax until you cash your bond or it stops earning interest in 30 years.

• Good for America

The same feature that makes savings bonds good for you make them good for America. Investing in savings bonds helps finance our country's needs.

Round about rules

I would like to know what the rules are governing roundabouts, or traffic circles, in base housing. I was under the impression you always drive to the right going into the circle. Recently, I noticed people driving to the left to cut the distance - I nearly got hit when someone did that in housing.

I talked to wing safety and they said the circles are considered roundabouts which means the rules for driving in roundabouts apply. People must yield to vehicles already in the circle and if they are travelling left, they must go into the circle and around. Vehicles may not make the left turn without going into the circle. If you see this, or any other traffic violation, call the security police at Ext. 23222.

Baby food at commissary

The commissary has been out of baby food for more than 10 weeks now. It's difficult to make baby food because of the limited fresh produce, and the frozen fruits and vegetables have additives that are allergenic for very young babies. I requested a special order but was told it couldn't be done. I don't understand that.

The baby food section at the commissary has gone through a lot of changes recently. On the May Strong Cajun we received 23 new items - of them, 10 were first foods. The base commissary carries the following items: 31 different second foods; 21 third stage foods; 15 juices; 9 powdered milks; 8 cereals; 6 dinners; 4 snacks; and 15 liquid milks. Baby food can also be purchased on the economy at pharmacies where they offer Gerber and Heinz products. Special orders can be placed for items not carried locally but available on the regional stock list. These items usually arrive in one week. Our commissary management has been working on the not-in-stock items to ensure orders are filled.

101 Critical Days

Carbon monoxide kills

Joe Raposo
Ground safety manager

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) warns consumers - including hunters and campers - never to burn charcoal inside homes, vehicles or tents. Burning charcoal produces carbon monoxide.

Carbon monoxide has no odor, cannot be seen, and can kill you. Consumers may not realize that burning charcoal produces carbon monoxide and that it will build up to a dangerous level. Opening a window or using a fan will not assure that carbon monoxide will be reduced to safe levels.

Victims die from carbonmonoxide poisoning after they burn charcoal in a bedroom or living room for heat or cooking. Some are campers who burn charcoal inside a tent or camper to keep warm. Others are hunters who burn charcoal inside their trucks, cars, or vans. Those who do not die can suffer headaches, drowsiness, dizziness, weakness, nausea, vomiting, confusion, disorientation or collapse.

Take the advice of the Consumer Product Safety Commission and never use charcoal to cook or provide heat inside enclosed areas such as tents, campers, vans, cars, trucks, homes, garages or mobile homes because the carbon monoxide can kill you.

What is the meaning of the little shrine that can be found in the coastal road between the villages of São Sebastião and Porto Judeu?

The small shrine marks the spot where a 13-year old girl from the village of São Sebastião was murdered. On June 4, 1940, Maria Vieira da Silva, accompanied by her four-year old sister, was taking lunch to her father who was working in a distant farm.

While walking through an isolated area, she was attacked by an old man who tried to rape her. She resisted the old man's repugnant intentions and cried for help. The would-be rapist then hit her in the head with a hoe fearing that his identity would be uncovered.

While her little sister ran for help, the old man hit her again with the purpose of killing her and then hid her in the bushes. Maria Vieira was found hours later by her father and was taken to the Angra Hospital where she perished on the following day.

Before she died she revealed the identity of her attacker and the crime's motive. She also conceded him her pardon for what he had done to her.

Many people on Terceira Island consider Maria Vieira a saint and every year hundreds of people visit the shrine to thank her for granting them graces.

Murra said, “they did just a superb job.” According to the team, however, a scoring problem in the passenger processing segment meant the team had to repeat the exercise and in doing so lost a third first-place trophy to Aviano by a slim 17 points of a possible 200 in the rematch.

On June 13, the focus shifted to the second annual 21st Air Force en route support awards at Ramstein AB, Germany. Marissa Burton received honors as the Outstanding Civilian Junior Grade and Rui Costa took home the award for Outstanding Local National Non-Supervisory. The logistics flight also left with recognition for being the best at their job in the 21st Air Force.

“Of course it’s nice to be able to come home with the trophies,” CMSgt. Cindy Clark, 629th AMSS logistics superintendent, said. “But the real reason behind the competition is to help us do our jobs more efficiently and learn new ways to help our customers. I know there are some other bases out there right now who are looking at what we were doing during the competition and incorporating some of our practices into their own operations.”

“Despite adversity and set backs in some of the events, our team conducted themselves in a truly professional manner. It was obvious throughout the week that Lajes had the greatest drive, team cohesion, and spirit,” Murra said. “I’m confident that when we go back next year we’ll do even better.”

Re-investigation report released

LANGLEY AIR FORCE BASE, Va. (AFNS) — The Air Force released the aircraft accident re-investigation report June 19 on the F-16D/C-130E midair collision at Pope Air Force Base, N.C., March 23, 1994. After the F-16 pilot ejected, the aircraft crashed into a staging area at Pope, killing 24 Army soldiers and injuring more than 100 others on the ground. The C-130 landed safely.

The original investigation found there were multiple causes for the midair collision, many of which occurred in air traffic control.

The Department of Defense Inspector General's review of the original report confirmed air traffic control was a major factor in the accident; however, it also said the report failed to adequately inquire into the actions of the F-16 pilot.

The Secretary of the Air Force directed a further investigation into this issue. The new investigation team looked at the issues considered mitigating factors for the F-16 pilot. They confirmed the flight paths of his aircraft and the C-130 made it impossible for him to see the C-130 for all but 12 seconds after he started a simulated flame-out maneuver. During that 12 seconds, the C-130 was nearly impossible to see against the forested terrain.

Investigators found the F-16 pilot received confusing tower transmissions. Also, after he heard the call, "C-130 traffic short final on the go," he had 17 to 20 seconds (excluding reaction time) to make adjustments to his flight path; but, immediately following this transmission, he was cleared to land.

The investigation team found that after the communications, the pilot didn't ask about the position of the other aircraft and didn't stop the simulated flame-out to look for the traffic.

The commander of 9th Air Force at Shaw AFB, S.C., will review the report to determine whether any disciplinary, administrative or other actions are appropriate. (Courtesy of Air Combat Command News Service)

Air Force selects 12 Outstanding Airmen of the Year for 1997

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AFNS) — The Air Force selected the service's top enlisted members, naming 12 airmen and noncommissioned officers as the Outstanding Airmen of the Year for 1997.

Nearly 50 people from the nine commands and a number from direct reporting units competed for the prestigious award. The 48 named are eligible to wear the service-unique 12 Outstanding Airmen of the Year ribbon.

This year's winners are as follows:

EQUAL list out July 15 for overseas returnees

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AFNS) — The latest Enlisted Quarterly Assignment Listing of available overseas-returnee enlisted assignments becomes available at military personnel flights and on the Air Force Personnel Center's World Wide Web home page July 15.

This list includes assignments for people eligible to return from overseas in November through January.

Personnel officials recommend assignment preferences be updated by July 29 to ensure the information is updated in the computer system before actual assignments are made. Assignments will be released around Sept. 1, say AFPC officials.

EQUAL advertises upcoming assignment requirements, by Air Force Specialty Code and rank, and gives people a chance to update their assignment preferences to more realistically match vacancies being filled in a particular cycle.

New listings are released quarterly for assignments available at overseas locations plus assignments available for those returning from overseas areas. All special-duty assignments appear on EQUAL-Plus and are updated weekly.

Military personnel flights and commanders support staff offices have copies of the listings and can help people update their preferences. People who are on temporary duty during the advertising period should contact the nearest personnel office for assistance.

People can access the AFPC home page using the address <http://www.afpc.af.mil>; then click on the highlighted "assignments" text. Assignment information is also available through the Air Force's home page at <http://www.af.mil>; then click on the "careers" icon. (Courtesy of AFPC News Service)

Anyone interested in horse riding or equestrian activities is invited to meet with others with similar interests Monday at 7 p.m. at the Top of the Rock Club. For more information, call Ext. 28224.

SGLI premium decrease

Effective July 1, the SGLI premium rate will be reduced from the current level of 9 cents per month per $1,000 of coverage to 8.5 cents per month per $1,000 of coverage. This reduces the premium rate for a service member with the maximum coverage of $200,000 from $18 to $17 a month. This reduction is a result of program management efficiencies achieved by the office of SGLI and the continuing low death rates among active-duty members and ready Reservists.

LOAC training

All members must attend law of armed conflict training. The following are training dates. For more information, call Ext. 23546 or 23354.

Monday - 9 and 11 a.m., 1 and 3 p.m.

Tuesday - 1 and 11 a.m., 1 and 3 p.m.

The training lasts about one hour. Briefings will be held at the base theater.

Car wash

The 65th Mission Support Squadron Booster Club will have a car wash and bake sale Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the commissary parking lot.

Free pro golf lessons

Everyone is invited to receive free golf lessons from the professionals competing in this year's Pro-Am tournament Monday through July 4. The lessons will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday and are free for anyone with or without club membership. There are no reservations - just show up at the driving range for a lesson.

UMD closed on 7th

The University of Maryland will be closed for business July 7. The school offices will reopen July 8 at 8 a.m. For more information, call Ext. 23355.

After a night at Sanjoaninas, when the rhythm of the road fades into a monotonous hum, fatigue can cause drivers to nod off into catastrophe.
